

Subject: CSWC Operational Period Summary 1800 December 31 to 0600 January 1 2014

WEATHER:

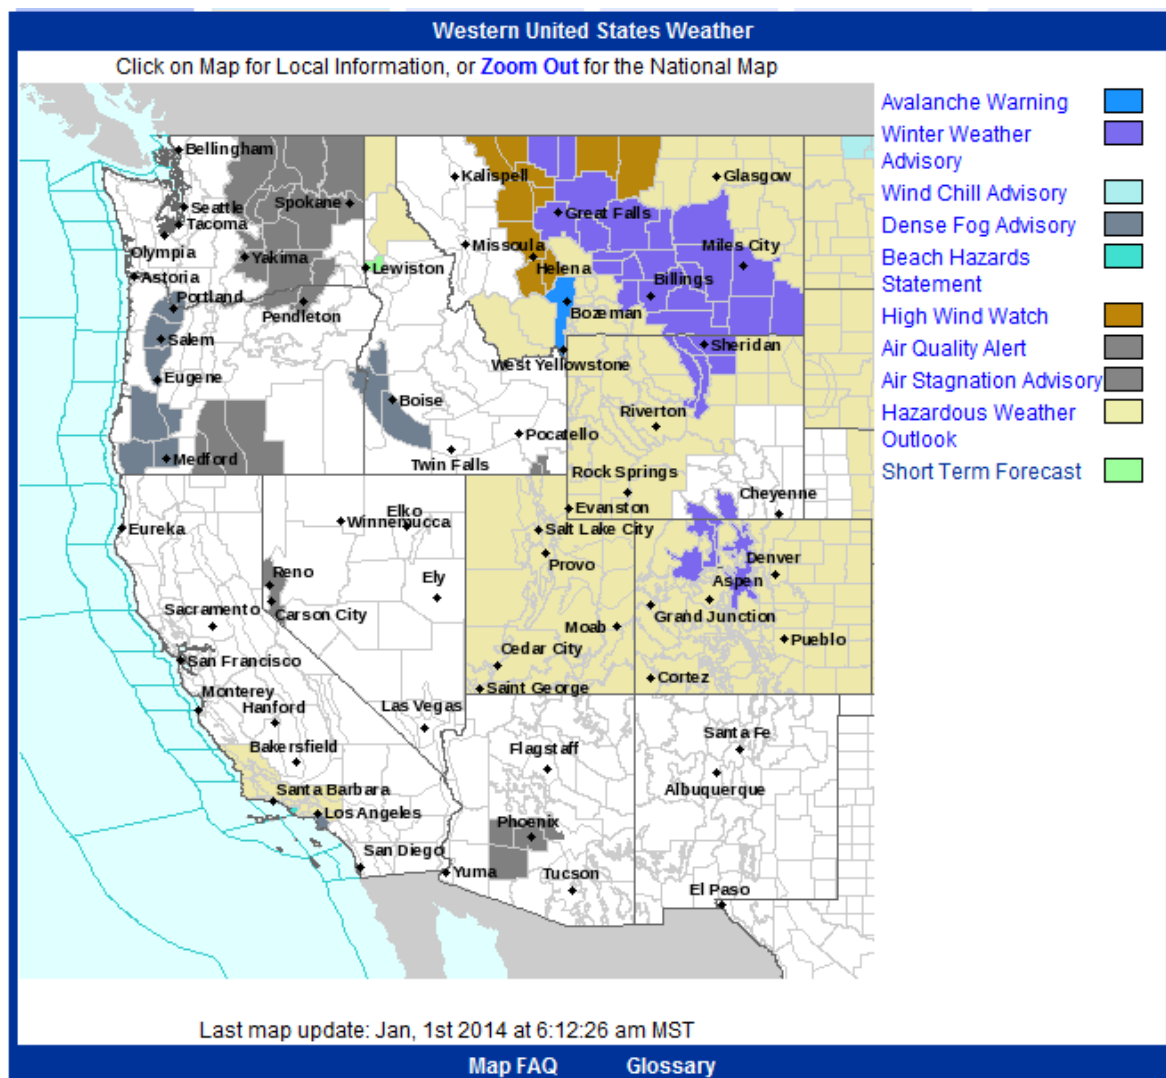

Northern California:

High pressure along the west coast will continue dry and warm weather through the coming week. A slight chance of showers may be possible early next week as a weak trough moves over the west coast.

Southern California:

A shallow marine layer and weak onshore flow will keep patches of low clouds and dense fog along the coast early this morning. A dry weather pattern will continue through next week as blocking ridge of high pressure will likely remain anchored over the eastern Pacific Ocean. A warm air mass with offshore breezes will likely persist into midweek next week.
